

2019 Expression of Interest Report

2019 Expression of Interest Responses

Overview

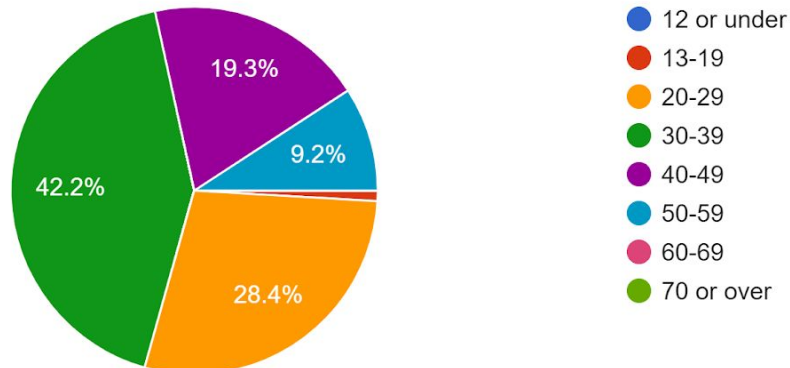

indiepodfest is a brand new independent podcasting festival coming to Melbourne in July 2019. The festival intends to be a celebration of indie publishing and, as such, the festival is interested in crowdsourcing programming ideas and desires from the community (and their fans) directly. The 2019 expression of interest was open for the month of February and promoted through social media podcasting groups and channels. At the time of closure there were 109 responses.

These results directly influenced the choice of festival venue, panels and workshops that have been programmed. The festival acknowledges the number of responses in no way represents the breadth and depth of the independent podcasting community in Australia, but hopes that, with the securing of funding, the reach of the festival will be much broader in its second year. The programming team has tried to recognise gaps to make the festival as inclusive and inspiring as possible for all kinds of audio makers, established and emerging.

Location

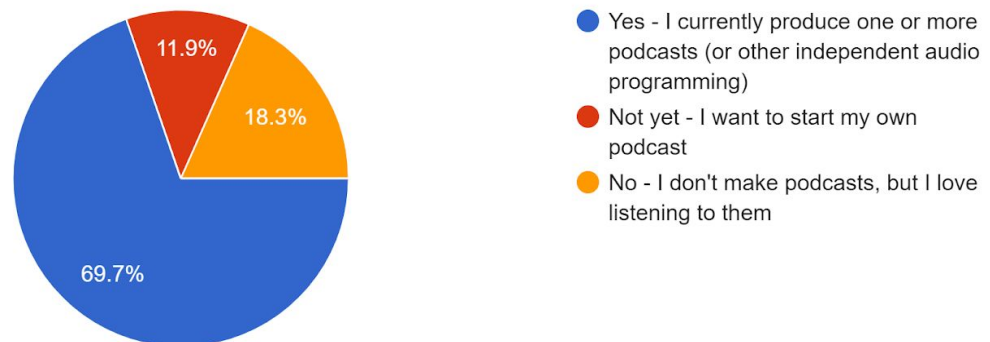

Access Requirements

All access requirements have been addressed with our chosen venue. We will also be providing a staff member devoted to diversity and inclusion, easily recognisable during the festival, who will be trained to respond to the needs of all patrons. Those of you who will require more room will be given an opportunity to request this during the ticketing process.

- Wheelchair/walker access and seating space
- Nearby parking
- Space up the front for hard of hearing patrons (and/or good sound)
- Written material for the festival available in large fonts
- Non gendered toilets
- Breastfeeding facilities (including access to a microwave and hot water)
- Space for patrons with an assistance animal

Do you make independent audio?

109 responses

What are the top three things you'd like to see at indiepodfest?

The many responses we had to this question can be distilled into the following major categories:

1. Live shows
2. Networking opportunities
3. Specific panel topics: podcast writing, production, marketing, sustainability and community building
4. Specific workshop topics: getting starting, improving audio quality, editing and production
5. Opportunities to learn from successful podcasters, those who have grown large audiences and/or secured funding
6. Diversity and inclusion - a good representation on panels and workshops of women, people of colour and minorities
7. Space for fans as much as creators

Response

indiepodfest acknowledges the lack of indigenous and culturally diverse producer responses to this expression of interest, and in the Australian podcasting community in general. The festival is addressing this with providing free festival passes and workshops to people of colour via an application process. The number of passes and workshops available is being determined, some will be contributed through the upcoming Pozible campaign ("pay it forward" purchases) and some donated by the festival.

Next Steps

A Pozible campaign will be facilitated to raise the funds to run the festival, launching around the 19th of April. The program will be announced in this campaign as well as some of the panellists and podcasts that will be present at the festival. The guest and presenter list will be a work in progress, finalised in June.
